STATE CAPITAL

Richmond—

America's oldest legislative body, the General Assembly of Virginia, swung into the 1924 session, with women seated as members for the first time in its 306 historic years, the special event causing scarcely a ripple in the ancient Capitol where a brief four-years ago the Federal equal suffrage amendment was emphatically rejected.

Interest in the opening session centered on the message of Governor E. Lee Trinkle, legislators, and public alike waiting eagerly his pronouncements on such important questions as tax equalization and highway construction financing, two matters to the fore at the present time. On the first question the Governor held but little encouragement, while his recommendations on highway finances will be one of the storm centers of the sixty-day session.

Division of maintenance funds for construction purposes and a two year loan based on anticipated revenues to bolster the highway finances for the biennium, were among the recommendations of Governor Trinkle, who also announced himself in favor of the State paying the interest on Robertson Act loans after the State has had the use of the money four years. He also favors a restriction on future Robertson act loans to $1,000,000 a year and recommends that the General Assembly give the State Highway Commission permission temporarily to ignore the present law allocating funds to eight geographical districts, using its discretion in applying the money to road construction.

Virginia is not ready for tax equalization, in the opinion of the Governor, who declared that the State would not benefit by equalization to any considerable extent, equalization being more of a local question. He recommended the establishing in each county and city of a board of equalization instead of a centralized State body, and at the same time announced himself in favor of returning to the old system of appointing, instead of electing commissioners of revenue.

That there should be no increase in the burden of taxation, was stressed by the Governor, who particularly warned against changing the present rate on intangibles.

Seven hours as the minimum day for State employees was recommended by Governor Trinkle, who also recommended a two weeks' vacation with pay for State employees. He urged that attention be given to a war memorial, and that the Ford lot be returned to the city of Richmond if it was not utilized by the State as the site for the memorial.

The Governor delivered his address in person, the House and Senate holding a joint session in the Hall of Delegates to receive him. The session followed the formal organization of each House, the lower body first going through the formality of electing R. L. Brewer, Jr., of Norfolk, as speaker for his third term. Other officers of both bodies were elected, including Clerks O. Y. Haeger, of the Senate, and John L. Williams, of the House.

Speaker Brewer in resuming his seat spoke briefly, pointing out that harmony will be the keynote of the coming session, despite reports that the session would be stormy. He declared that any effort to increase taxation will be vigorously opposed by him, and like Governor Trinkle he warned against meddling with the intangibles tax rate.

Mrs. Sarah Lee Fain and Mrs. Helen Timmons Henderson are the pioneer women delegates of the former comes from Norfolk and the latter from Russell county. Forty-four new members are on the House roster, while the Senate roll shows eighteen new members.

The two houses were opened formally at noon, prayer in the Senate being offered by Rev. George P. Mayo and by the Rev. J. Y. Fair in the House. Then came the election of officers, followed by the joint session.

Bills were tossed into the legislative hopper of both branches early in the session. The important measures introduced in the House included two bills for the regulation of the Virginia Pilot Association and one providing for the payment by the State of interest on Robertson act loans after the State has had the money three years. In the Senate fifteen bills were introduced by the Commission Simplification and Economy of Government, all dealing with minor changes, designed to effect economy in various departments.

The address of Governor Trinkle was a lengthy one. The Governor after making recommendations and suggestions, ended his address by calling on the people of Virginia to honor, instead of knocking, their State. He declared he found a woeful ignorance among the people concerning their State and its government and an addenda to his message is filled with information that he asks the entire State to study.

Governor Trinkle expressed his confidence in the financial condition of the State, declaring that the deficit was not discouraging in view of the fact that the deficits in the last two years had a period of depression following the World War, and that Virginia has not suffered as much as some other States. He recommended that the deficit be cancelled as a deficit in the expectation that the revenues would increase and wipe it out." At the same time he called for caution and economy in the appropriations for the biennium. He was emphatic in his praise of the budget system.

Prohibition enforcement came in for a lengthy chapter in the message. The first applause to greet the Governor's address came when he declared that violators of the prohibition laws and persons convicted of driving automobiles while under the influence of liquor, need not appeal to him for clemency. He called on law-abiding citizens to get squarely behind the enforcement officers, and urged officials to help enforce the dry laws in spite of the fact that the Attorney - General is specifically charged with prohibition enforcement.

Governor Trinkle received another burst of applause when he pointed to the position occupied by Virginia in road building as compared with forty-three States in 1924. He showed that the increase in automobile license fees and the gasoline levy had far outstripped his figures in his estimate at the special session in 1923, and that his conservatism gives Virginia considerably more money for highway building than has been anticipated.

In lauding the budget system, Governor Trinkle said that he knew it was not perfect. He advocated that all funds collected from any and all sources be passed into the treasury, and paid out by regular appropriation, declaring that segregated funds lead to waste and prevent proper oversight of their disbursement and violate the fundamental principle of wise handling of public money taken from the people in the shape of taxes.

Governor Trinkle suggested the urgent need of restricting the judicial criminals in order to equalize the work and also called to the attention of this Assembly by recommendation of the Virginia Bar Association that there be a revision of judges' salaries and compensation for those who have served a certain number of years and reached a certain age.

Boldose pointing out the need of a memorial to Virginia men and women who served in the World War, Governor Trinkle urges the people of Virginia to purchase Stars and display them on holidays. He also urged merchants to stock flags and sell them at a reasonable price.

Need of studying the water-power possibilities, preventing pollution of streams and other economic measures were discussed by the Governor briefly. He declared that a State Chamber of Commerce is among the needs of the Commonwealth, and also urged more attention be given inland waterways.

The Governor pointed to the progress in schools, declaring that in his belief Virginia was getting more for her money than any other State. He recommended that the public schools be given first attention if any additional revenues not covered by the budget are found. That he believed in the three "R's" being properly taught, was emphasized by the Governor.

Protection of gasoline purchasers by the establishment of an inspection system was recommended by Governor Trinkle. He also urged that a proper license tax be placed on motor vehicle carriers.

To tide over the two anticipated "lean" years in highway financing, Governor Trinkle wants authority to make temporary loans to be paid back within twenty-four months after the loan is made. These loans would be refunded by warrants of public accounts and payable out of the mill tax and the gasoline levy. Just how much the State Highway Commission would be permitted to divert from the maintenance fund for construction purposes the Governor did not say.

Ferguson Continues As Caucus Chairman.

Appomattox county carries off the honors at the hands of the Legislature. Senator Samuel L. Ferguson, of Appomattox, serving his second term, is continued as the caucus chairman, and Delegate John R. Horsley, of the same county, is chairman of the House Committee on Privileges and Elections, according to generally accepted ballot around the halls of legislation.

Both are well known in their districts and in the State, and they have the same, general characteristics—they do not occupy much of the time of the two bodies with speeches.

Lieut. Gee Is Recommended.

Second Lieutenant William Gee, of Company L, One Hundred and Eighty-third Infantry, Newport News, has been recommended by the Adjutant General of Virginia, to attendance at the Military Service School at Fort Benning, Ga., which opens February 25.

Williamsburg.—At a meeting of the County Board of Supervisors held at the courthouse, R. L. Spencer appeared and requested an appropriation to assist with the expenses of the Peninsula Fair Association. Without any discussion over the matter, the board voted to give $250.

Apologized for the Fish.

Politeness has developed among the orientals to a degree of extravagance that is intensely amusing to visitors, affirms to the people themselves, as was the case when the popular Prince Kuni of Japan was fishing at Ritsprin Koen and twice lost a big fish from his line and the governor of the province appeared and made profuse apologies for the unfriendly and inconsiderate behavior of the fish.—Ohio State Journal.

Ford Service Exclusively

Beginning January First 1924 We Will Service and Repair Ford Cars, Ford Trucks, Fordson Tractors and Lincoln Cars Only

We have realized for some time that with the several hundred Ford cars already in our territory and the ever-growing number of new Ford owners each year, that we would be unable to continue repairs on other makes of cars, and give to the Ford owners in this section the prompt service that they should expect and to which they are entitled.

We wish to thank those customers who own other than Ford cars and who have given us a liberal share of their repair work, and want them to know that we deeply appreciate the business given us, but we feel that our duty is to service those products which we sell, and which are delivered to our customers with the understanding that they shall receive prompt, courteous and efficient service at all times, in this connection, we wish to say to both present and prospective Ford owners that we are constantly adding new and improved Ford machinery in our shops, and the year 1924 will find us rendering better and more efficient Ford service than at any time in the past.

We Thank you All for the valuable business given us through 1923, and wish for You a most pleasant and profitable New Year.

PAMPLIN

During last week there was quite a moving of tobacco into this place. This seems to indicate that farmers are willing to exchange their dark leaves for smaller, green leaves, bearing the stamp and signature of Uncle Sam. There was a time when tobacco was the staple currency of the colonies and goods were bought and sold and paid for in tobacco, but of course, times have changed and farmers prefer the lighter and more convenient article that can easily be stored away in vaults or money safes to be used when needed. This is the logical thing to do.

I am glad to note the convalescence of Rev. Duling, who has been confined to his room for a week or more, failing to be at his regular appointment at S. S.

I note some little commotion in our community. I believe it would be the pleasure of the judges in this matter to "give honor to whom honor is due", regardless of whom it pleases. I believe in open court. I have learned by experience that great injustice can be done by not hearing both sides of a case. The ominous culprit with a conscience blunted by sins of bygone days, once gave in evidence against me which did me great injustice, without me having opportunity to make a defense. This was wrong men.' In all cases of this kind you should at least follow the Golden Rule—"Do unto others as you would have them do to you."

(We judge our correspondent refers to the faculty of the Pamplin High School—It's better to tell the whole story. Ed.)

Our Billy Sunday Club holds their regular meetings at Masonic Hall every Saturday night.

Since the blizzard passed we've been having some fine weather January gave us a cold greeting, but now he cheers us with his smiles.

Come shadow or come shine,
We're hoping to see
The day when the rivulets
Run merrily and free.
When the winter shall die
And be laid very low,
Edshrouded with a robe
That is whiter than snow.

Womack—Thornhill

On Xmas eve at the Baptist Parsonage, James Carl Womack and Miss Olivia Mildred Thornhill were united in marriage by Rev. H. Parlett East. After the ceremony, which was witnessed by a number of friends, The happy couple left for a short wedding trip.

They are highly esteemed in he county, and the best wishes of their friends are hereby extended. They will reside in the county.

HIXBURG

On account of the illness of the pastor Rev. W. B. Duling there was no preaching at the Baptist church here on the Second Sunday. However Mrs. Wilson Hix delegate to the General Association reported a fine time and Mrs. McCue gave a talk on the campaign and both stressed special emphasis on the importance that we should keep our pledge to the campaign by paying our obligations.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Rosser were Sunday guests of home folks here and on their way back home they found a sack containing quite a lot of children's clothes and some other articles. The owner can have same by giving description. Gladys Swan has missed school ever since Xmas on account of whooping cough, but she is some better at this writing.

Now I hear of so many different oues killing wild turkeys among the nimrods being E. P. Sears. Now I will tell you a real turkey tale, one of our neighbors picked up his axe and started to the woods to cut a small pole to use on his wagon and looking in the direction of his wheat field saw fifteen wild turkeys, he steped back and took gun in one hand and axe in the other and when he got to the edge of the timber dropped his axe and proceeded, probably much excited, as he hung his foot fell and broke the stock off the gun in just a short distance of the turkeys, placed the two parts together, sprung the gun and killed a big gobbler, saw 13 rise and fly, one trying to fly and could not,but he ran right back to him and as it passed he took after it and into the river they both went, the man still holding to the stock of the gun with which he beat the fine bird to death and after a long search the gun barrel was found on the ground so deep that it took several to pull it up. However this man says he would not shoot under the same circumstance, as again for all the wild turkeys in the state.

I was supposed to write a fox chase but as the turkey hunter had one on the chase I may tell you about the fox later Now some of you may wonder who killed those turkeys so I will tell you, it was John Marshall.

George Thomas and family have moved from the farm of J H. McCue to C S. Cawthorn on the river, George made a good crop at Mr. McCue's last year.

HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK

Lynchburg.—Bland Massie, of Tyro, Nelson county, former member of the Virginia House of Delegates, and three times a member of the State Senate and a large orchard owner, died at his home, aged 68 years.

Richmond.—A resolution has been adopted by the Board of Supervisors of Alleghany county, calling the conservationists in the House of Delegates and State Senate to urge an increase in the State tax rate for schools from 14 to 35 cents on the $100. A copy of the resolution is being forwarded to the representatives.

Bristol.—E. W. King, who, for ten years, has been president of the First National Bank here, resigned at the annual meeting of the stockholders. He will act as chairman of the board of directors and finance committee. Walter W. Lyon, first vice-president of the institution, was elected president to succeed Mr. King. Mr. Lyon has been connected with the bank since he was twelve years of age, when he accepted a position there as errand boy.

Richmond.—Indorsement of legislation pertaining to welfare of women and children, living conditions and education and adequate appropriation was made by the fifteen organizations represented by the Virginia Women's Council of Legislative Chairmen of State Organizations meeting in the Capitol Building. Miss May L. Moore presided, presided. Reports from the different organizations, showing the legislation they wanted, were read.

Richmond.—Wool growers of Virginia will meet in Richmond in annual convention February 13, Director Meek, of the United States Bureau of Markets has announced. The Virginia Co-Operative Live-Stock Shipping Association probably will meet here at the same time. The wool growers will elect directors on the basis of the amount of wool in pools by the various districts in the State. Mr. Meek stated that wool pooled this year has reached 250,000 pounds, but has not been sold as yet.

Danville.—The fight has been started here by the tobacco warehouse interests to bring about the repeal of the Virginia tobacco marketing laws during the session of the Legislature. Petitions are being circulated here by J. H. Wilson, president of the Virginia-Carolina Warehousemen's Association, which is sponsoring the movement calling on the General Assembly to abolish the laws on the ground that they are discriminatory against the warehousemen, and are distinctively partisan in purpose. Mr. Wilson, in a statement made here, declares that he has been told that efforts will be made by "pool" proponents to tighten the existing laws, and to restrict the warehouse business that it will mean its elimination in this State.

Ship's Direction Finder.

The latest in wireless direction finders has just been installed on one of the transatlantic liners. With this device it is possible to ascertain in a few seconds a ship's bearing toward any one land wireless station. If touch is secured with two or more stations, the exact position of the vessel is found by cross-bearings. The value of such a direction-finder in thick or hazy weather is obvious.
